

SPECIAL PRIVATE VIEWING TOUR

Japan's National Treasure, 'Maple Viewers' folding screen

At INFINITY we have unique connections within the art world, including museums and world-class artists. The National Treasure 'Maple Viewing' folding screen is owned by the Tokyo National Museum. INFINITY can arrange special private viewings of Kanō Hideyori's treasured work which recreates the custom of enjoying autumn leaves in Japan. Afterwards, guests are invited to dine under autumn leaves in a museum garden which recreates the screen painting from the Muromachi - Azuchi-Momoyama period. After dining, guests are welcome to enjoy a traditional Japanese Noh play 'Momijigari.'

SCENE 2

Dine under autumn leaves

The tradition of viewing autumn leaves, as depicted in Kanō's folding screen, is recreated in the museum garden. Enjoy dishes created by celebrated chefs under a canopy of autumn leaves.

Firelit viewing of the Noh play, 'Momijigari.'

'Momijigari' is a story of a noble woman enjoying the beautiful autumn leaves then unexpectedly takes on the form of a demon. This is a memorable performance in a unique stage with colourful autumn leaves.

HIGHLIGHT PLAN

INFINITY MUGEN'S ART / MUSEUM

Creating unforgettable art experiences, our network of museums, galleries and artists

At INFINITY we have connections with the art world, including with museums, art galleries, and Japanese artists of global repute. Trust us to put together a variety of art-related experiences and plans.

Studio tour with up-and-coming ceramic artist Takahiro Koga, coveted by collectors in Japan and abroad

With pieces that include a studded beckoning cat and a sake cup inspired by the face armor of Sengoku warlords, Koga's art has a powerful presence. The artist will lead a tour of his workshop among works that are the envy of collectors around the world.

The daring style of Koga's works, created from his rural base, presents a bold challenge to society's norms.

Koga pursues an 'anti Wabi-sabi' theme in order to give his art a daring, bold presence, despite the artist himself having respect for Sen no Rikyū.

Taking into account historical and cultural contexts, Koga's work reveals his respect for classical art. Requests to commission original works are possible.

A special time among fine art
